Flying Saucer Review introduces alien contact re-enactments.

To illustrate the full facts and set the tone of what a human alien contact case comprises, FSR wishes to better represent what contactees have revealed. An attractive modern graphical format alongside the most accurate first-hand narrative extracts creates a new highly collectable series of contact images. The full transcript of the following case can be found under the heading "Meetings with compassionate aliens, part 2" on page 13 of this issue.

A strange cloud approached us across the lake. It resembled a snowstorm of miniature hexagons hidden in rainbow colours. The little shapes within were less than a centimetre in size and formed a single layer like the snowstorm of a bad T.V. signal.

I walked up to the cloud as it came to a halt. The hexagon like particles now surrounded me. I suddenly became aware there was a flash of blue movement to the right of me.

A woman dressed in a blue one-piece body suit was wrapped within this energy field with me. She had shoulder length brown hair and was about 5 foot six inches tall. She felt like an overwhelmingly familiar friend.

I have always known her. She gave me her warm friendship greeting in her facial expression. I began to feel the familiar energy plunger on my head, a rocky sort of wave of energy all around me.It felt like we were still outdoors. However, now there was a sort of banked seating arrangement like an amphitheatre.

A tall figure of a man stood in front of us. He appeared to be some sort of overseer. He was wearing a medieval style cloak and something resembling a skullcap on his head. His great stature was more than seven feet, as was that of the distinct group of a dozen towering figures sitting behind him on raised benches.

I now noticed that two of these men were wearing strange devices on their heads and were operating on some kind of light technology around my friend Corn. It was like a network of pipes of pure light energy. He was still held in a cold motionless trance. I felt so uneasy, I said out loud, "What do you want? Why are we here?"

The overseer looked at me and motioned "shhhh". I noticed the woman from inside the hexagons was now standing near me again. She was now holding what appeared to be an open book. I said to her, looking at the figures surrounding my friend 'Corn', "What are their names?" Perhaps this was so I could get their attention. The woman in blue pointed her hand to one of the figures and said, "His name is John". "John" then looked up from what he was doing, and raised an acknowledging glance towards me. Full account on page 13.

EDITORIAL

Flying Saucer Review Renewed.

Welcome to this special flying-cigar edition of Flying Saucer Review. Firstly we must apologise for the late arrival of this Winter issue, 48/4. This is due to the necessary reorganising of this journal following the loss of our beloved late editor, Gordon Creighton last Summer. The Directors of FSR have established a new editorial board to govern the duties of Editor. This new incarnation of FSR will honour all the aspirations of our previous editors and founders. The strongest possible emphasis will be on maintaining our reputation for producing engaging, challenging articles in our journal. The serious tone with which we have approached the UFO subject for 50 years will remain, alongside our commitment to be the broadest possible representation of diversity. FSR is aiming to be a news leader in our subject. For those who relish groundbreaking articles, it is hoped that many important news stories will break here in coming issues. The five previous editors have carried this journal all the way into the early 21st Century. This is the sixth incarnation of FSR and, rather like entering the age of Mexico's sixth sun, it heralds the coming age of wonders.

Where are the independent voices missing from our controlled media today? Who is talking directly, honestly and intelligently on the sensitive subject of UFOs? The pioneers of the first UFO age would be astonished at how desperately low the gravity of our once important subject has become. So plainly have we lost the sympathetic ear of our media services, academics, local and national representative authorities, our police and armed services and their strategic command structures. All now heavily censor themselves, in relation to our enquiries. They hide their own private views for fear of being denounced in classic Orwellian fashion. To be widely quoted on UFO issues in this age threatens one's career standing in many ways: promotion prospects, the ability to obtain funding, membership of societies, loss of serious peer review, and risks to future opportunities for holding senior office, such as on committees. Open UFO believers are a curiously small section of our society. They look set to continue their enforced exile from the mainstream. To those who might deny this fact and believe we are achieving relative success in our endeavours: How many, out of the millions of academic published papers today even mention UFOs? How many journalists, documentary makers, current affairs and opinion makers have UFO believers in the editorial team? How many textbooks and academic resource books are there for our subject? How many bookshops, and book archives in national and local libraries, contain a serious UFO section? How many doctors, lawyers, church ministers, teachers and other community leaders are UFO believers? We don't even appear to own our own subject; to validate what we represent we must first be able to define what it is exactly that we believe in.

What makes a small minority activity become a successful global majority movement? The rise of environmentalism, alternative medicine and civil rights movements have all been success stories which have all arisen within the current life time of ufology. Success was truly achieved when the minority view so clearly became the majority view, that all organised forces of resistance collapsed. Why have we singularly failed to make such ground for ourselves after fifty years? This editorial is a statement of an intention to construct a far more organised authoritative basis for our subject. We need briefing documents and special theories, definitive articles to start the debate rolling on what we believe and what imperative changes to our outlook must happen. There will be features spread over forthcoming issues where we will start the learning revolution in a new speculative framework. We envisage a collective, definitive working knowledge base that will constantly remodel itself and evolve in relation to new advances. There are countless vital clues that exist in isolation today which we will re-unite tomorrow to form our most comprehensive knowledge base so far. What we must decide is what goes in the very first draft. We must believe in strong rationale and defined principles. To the outsiders: "We are what we believe". Take the first step, begin with us in our new approach. A best current solution awaits you for the cigar UFO in this Winter issue, 48.4. Cigars may be in profusion in our skies. - Harry Challenger. ■

FSR'S GLOBAL UFO NEWS

Sighting commentaries from the World UFO News Networks.

The sighting news for Winter 2003-04 will begin with a comprehensive study of global flying cigar reports. A hypothesis in an article following these sighting reports suggests that these giant craft have a primary observed function as fleet launchers of many small saucers and spheres.

We can learn to more effectively monitor the geographic movements of flying cigars. We may learn in time to give them priority; to create an observer chain alert immediately after in a post-sighting location. Flying cigars may often have released multiple small craft and create new areas of high incidence in the time immediately after a cigar sighting.

Low altitude saucers are often seen covertly disembarking and embarking humanoid occupants. A further hypothesis elsewhere in this issue considers a case profiling "alien sojourners", trained covert alien operators who conceivably would need to be dropped in. Therefore, monitoring low altitude cigar activity may be most important news. Perhaps even a guide to which regions are currently highest on the alien priority list. Places where perhaps they would be forced to risk low altitude drops of personnel.

Many of the following overseas cigar reports come from the pages of Filers Files, currently based at, http://www.ufoinfo.com/filer/index.shtml. This is an excellent global internet resource for monitoring world UFO sightings. George Filer, Eastern Mufon director is based in the USA. He is one of the inspired hard workers who make the difference in this subject, and can be considered one of its statesmen.

Just sort of hanging there. It didn't seem to be going anywhere, but it looked like it was rotating, albeit very slowly and a little irregularly. This object appeared to be long and thin, but not cylindrical. It was relatively dark-greyish. Not really metallic, but quite matt. Nonetheless it appeared to catch the sun when it rotated.

A high altitude cigar over London was observed to split longitudinally into two on September the 14th 2003. A three hour aerial display by multiple spheres followed along the length of the observer path. The spheres took part in a series of geometric displays and were captured on 4 cameras. The full report of this event appears on the back cover of this issue.

The hook on the end of the cigar and 4 ball craft resemble historic events depicted over Basel in Switzerland in 1556.

Other sightings of cigars over U.K. airspace in 2003 included the Wolverhamption cigar object which turned up on a photograph taken on 16th March 2003 by David Rose.

A cigar was seen over Burnley on 06/09/03 and witnessed by cab driver Steve Haworth and his passenger. It suddenly appeared, performed a series of mind-boggling manoeuvres and then simply disappeared without trace after three minutes.

Arizona - Cigar Shaped Black Object Spotted on 10/12/03 : Filers Files. SANDERS - The witness was driving to work in the early morning just before dawn on December 10, 2003, at 9:15 PM when he saw a light that was as bright as Venus. It got bright and then dimmed altogether. What was left hanging unmoving in the sky was a black cigar-shaped vehicle with a bump on the top. I pulled into the parking lot and watched it just hover and never move. It was very black and did not reflect light off it and made no noise whatsoever.

Six cigars sighted in Arizona 05/01/04 Filers Files. SELIGMAN - Three friends were driving back from Las Vegas, on January 5, 2004, when the driver commented on "the really bright stars" that had appeared about 45 minutes before sunset. The objects seemed to be moving. Within minutes, we saw a bright light change to a cigar shape that turned red very suddenly. It appeared to explode and I yelled and we watched intently as the first object began to fall, while the second white object turned a bright red and hovered over the mountain range adjacent to interstate 40 southbound. The object started to do several other bizarre things, like break out into a lateral acceleration that must have covered 50 miles within seconds, stop, turn colours, lift into the sky and return to its low altitude, go in reverse immediately with rapid speed, then rocket off again.

After reaching the near-end of the mountain range, the view improved, and it joined five or six more just like it, but each one was a varying intensity of red light. All of these objects demonstrated their agility and handling just as the first. One by one, the objects were either disappearing behind trees or hills or literally vanishing into thin air.

Colorado - Large, Low Flying Cigar With Two Lights Flying East 18/12/03 Filers Files HESPERUS — At about 9:30 PM, on December 18, 2003, a couple heard a loud noise, which caused them to run outside and observe a cigar-shaped object 200 feet above their house. There were two lights, one above the other, slightly tilted with the upper light being forward. It turned very slowly so that the lights were eventually horizontal to one another. It was much too large to be a helicopter and its size was about that of a large passenger plane.

However, it did not sound like a passenger plane, nor could one fly this slowly. The eyewitness ran into the house and got the binoculars, and watched for another ten minutes. It hovered over the mountain for five minutes. There was another small white light near it while it was hovering, and I thought it to be a small aeroplane. My husband is a mechanical engineer and has studied and understands aircraft. He had no idea what this was.

Mississippi - Large, Cylinder Shaped Craft 08/01/04 BILOXI Filers Files. A large cylinder shaped craft was seen hovering above the Gulf of Mexico about a mile from the city on January 8, 2004. The witness was driving east on I-90 and looked out over the Gulf and saw a long dark shape that was maybe 50 feet above the water at 4:45 PM. It was a good distance away so I couldn't make out any distinct shape. I watched it for more than 5 minutes and it never moved. It just sat there.

Polished metallic cylinder Everett, Washington State 10/9/2003. Duration: 2 minutes. Polished metallic cylinder stationary in daytime sky slowly rotates then disappears instantly. I was observing a Washington State Patrol light aeroplane circling the area. As it circled overhead I noticed what appeared to be a star, 50 to 60 degrees above the horizon behind the aeroplane. I first thought it might be a balloon as the local automobile dealerships use a lot of them. I noticed that it was not moving with the wind, which was 15 to 20 mph. I then observed the object through 12X50 Bushnell binoculars. Through binoculars the object resembled highly polished aluminium. I then thought it was perhaps a Mylar balloon and continued to observe it. It then rotated slowly in a clockwise direction to reveal that it was oblong. It was shaped like a cylinder and bisected length-wise, slightly flared at the bottom edges. I thought it might be a helicopter at high altitude but there were no rotors visible. While I was observing, it disappeared instantly. Weather was moderate, windy, and partly cloudy. I am a mechanical engineer and aviation enthusiast with 25 years experience in the technical field.

Tasmania Cigar-Shaped UFO Seen 13/12/03 Launceston. Filers Files. On Saturday, December 13, 2003, at 10:05 PM, the eyewitness A.B. reported, "George and I were at my country property just north of Launceston in Australia's island state of Tasmania, sitting outside, having a smoke. George noticed a long, cigar-shaped glowing object approaching from the north-east, high in the sky. As it approached the property, it slid lower into the sky and appeared as if it would land. Moreover, as fast as it appeared, it flew away with only a slight tingling in the air to confirm it had ever been there at all. It was about 80 meters (264 feet) above ground, lowering to about 20 meters (66 feet). At its minimum speed, I would say it approached 200 kilometres per hour (120 miles per hour)." Launceston is in northern Tasmania, about 250 kilometres (150 miles) north of Hobart, the state capital. FSR Comment: Large cigars and massive flying triangles might represent the awesome display of power from an unknown civilisation. We need to consider vastly increasing our monitoring of these incursions and begin thinking strategically. ■

A historical briefing on the multi-launch capability of cigar craft. A comparison with modern Sightings. By Harry Challenger & Arthur Hudson.

3rd July 1967, Cumberland, Rhode Island. Taken by Joseph L. Ferriere. Taken with permission from UFO Photographs Vol.2. by Wendelle Stevens and August C. Roberts.

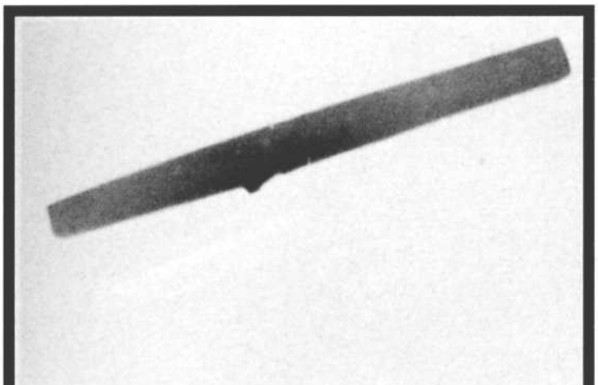

While constructing this article for FSR it was soon apparent that the majority of the historical data already resided in a book authored by Wendelle Stevens and August C. Roberts. "UFO Photographs Around the World" is a masterful two-volume work published in 1985. It contains very detailed background on what many would consider some of the world's finest landmark UFO photographs. It is an essential photographic resource for any library of ufology.

The first part of this article is therefore a review of some of the best-observed cases. These relate to multi-launches of disc shaped craft observed coming directly out of cigar objects. Many of those are represented in the book. FSR would like to extend warm appreciation to Wendelle Stevens for allowing us the use of source material from this remarkable book.

The second part of this article is new material describing a 2003 U.K. summer cigar wave. Did this correspond with a wave of late-summer sightings of groups of small craft over London?

In this article we will consider the flying cigar craft and the many three-ball saucer UFOs apparently being launched by these objects. When looking at the FSR logo it is easy to miss that, from high up behind the swooshing saucer, there is a small cigar shape. When this magazine was in its infancy, the cigar mother-craft was already well known, thanks to George Adamski. Reports of incidents involving multiple small three-balled craft were specifically noted by an entire generation of ufologists. Where better to start the systematic reappraisal of our subject than by a briefing document on the very thing this journal was named after: the flying saucer.

The entities operating the saucers appear to be working from a similar position to us. They appear to need large general support craft to back up their earthly operations. Rather like the concept of a flying aircraft carrier. Observations by witnesses also propose additional evidence of temporary ground bases to provide additional support for the small active flying units. These observations will be considered in a forthcoming FSR article.

The natural public misconception is to believe the classic shuttle-sized flying saucers are the very same UFO craft that convey occupants to and from destinations outside our earth. In fact, from the very earliest reports, these small flying saucers have been observed to be acting mainly in a secondary transport role. It is likely, evidenced by many observations, that the majority of flying saucers are launched internally to our atmosphere. From many anecdotal observations relating to the internal sparse interior of flying saucers it makes them sound more akin to the minimal facilities we would find in an elevator. This may indicate how short a transit time they are designed for.

The much larger flying discs, many hundreds of feet across, are not to be confused with the far smaller flying saucers, and will be considered in a forthcoming issue.

The astute observer should consider prioritising the proper surveillance of these large carrier cigar-craft. It is likely that the technologically advanced UFO occupants do not need low level observation craft. Therefore the small flying saucer may primarily act to get the saucer occupants to and from the ground. If a ground alien contact agenda is to be understood, we need to monitor how these carrier craft arrange their activities prior to covert landing operations.

The cigars appear to operate at great speed in the air space behind the great parading clusters of aerial spheres and discs frequently seen over our major cities. Those involved in monitoring cigars are aware of the power-cuts and communications black-outs associated with these craft. When these cigar objects are at low altitude they appear to use a rapid spinning energy field on their long axis which may be responsible for these specific effects.

We are now going to consider a number of classic cases where very large cigar craft are seen to either disgorge or absorb the smaller saucer-shaped craft. If this repeated observation holds true, then the principle waves of saucer sightings should coincide with associated sightings of much larger cigar craft. The large quantity of cigar reports means only token cases have been selected for consideration. The World Sightings section contains two whole pages of cigar sightings. Let's step out of the shadow of the colossus in our skies.

Classic Early Sightings

A classic early era example is the wave of French sightings in October 1952 at Oleron, Basses-Pyrenees. The details of the following report in this region come as quotes from the book Flying Saucers come from Another World (1954) by Jimmy Guieu. The italic text is additional consideration added for the purposes of this article.

"On October 17 1952 at 12.50pm there appeared in the sky over Oleron a kind of cylinder inclined at an angle of 45 degrees. It was white. A bluish-white vapour trailed from its upper extremity. A few moments later a large number of other objects, spherical in form, appeared both before and behind the cylinder." This sighting was accompanied by a lot of angel hair.

"It wasn't until I used the glasses that I could see that each consisted of a central sphere circled by a light yellow belt, like one of Saturn's rings. This sphere was acutely tilted towards the sun, thus covering part of the sphere's lower half."

"The apparent length to the naked eye of this lead-coloured cigar - or, rather, cylinder, for it looked for all the world like a stove-pipe - was about two yards."

This was a multiple witnessed sighting: the spheres when seen through binoculars were observed to resemble classic flying saucers. The cigar was also referred to as a 'lead-coloured stove pipe'. It was 2 yards long at high altitude in relation to the witnesses, which was suggestive of an enormous craft.

The famous initial account of the desert Cigar contact of George Adamski took place on 20th November 1952, a month later to the French sighting. Again he observed a massive cigar craft. It was likely to have launched the much smaller scout craft with which he made first humanoid contact later that same afternoon. The following case (FSR Vol.8 No.3) describes the large number of saucers associated with these large craft.

On the night of October 14th 1961 at an Argentine steel plant in the province of Buenos Aires two cigars were observed. At least fifteen discs were sighted 10 minutes later, followed by a second formation of fifteen flying discs within minutes. The average disc reported has often been described as 20-30 feet (approximately). To carry at least fifteen 30 feet objects would require a cigar craft measured in many hundreds of feet.

Joseph L. Ferriere on July 3rd 1967 at Cumberland Rhode Island. Ferriere, a part time UFO investigator, worked on a radio station in a U.S. district called Woonsocket. While responding with an investigation to multiple reports of a large object seen in East Winsocket, he snapped the famous series of photos.

He estimated the object to be 100 feet above tree-top level and between 100 and 150 feet in length. It appeared rock-like externally, as if its surface was uneven like charcoal. It had a peculiar piston-like movement at one end, and a hatch opened in its centre. It appeared to release a saucer-like craft from this hatch, which rapidly moved away. The cigar was then observed to turn into a vertical position and depart the scene. The picture featured below is the small saucer-like object released from the cigar. The object was remarkable in its resemblance to the early Adamski images of flying cigars published in the early 1950s.

The Woonsocket cigar sighting was predated a month earlier by a classic saucer photo series taken by Harold Trudel. Again, a cigar is sighted operating in a specific area over a period of weeks; in context of its time and location it's bang on target with an associated local saucer sighting.

In the late 1960s, when there were many organised vigils in the hills around Warminster, England, people observed cigar craft disgorging UFOs. A typical sighting of an illuminated cigar in the night sky would include multiple small red craft that would spiral frantically away. They would rapidly change into a blue colour and speed on their way into the night sky. Some of these objects resembled vertical cigars standing on end, and seemed embedded in cloud.

Warminster ufologist Chris Trewbridge captured this image of a cigar craft near Upton Skudamore at the height of the Warminster era.

In the mid-1970s Japan was the centre of an intense period of cigar activity. The following photograph taken in July 1974 at Kirigamine, Nagano, Japan shows a cigar and a dark spherical object apparently launched from within it.

Another Japanese cigar photo series from 1974, taken at Onomichi, Hiroshima-Ken. A cigar was sighted by another high school student aged 16. A three-ball UFO of the classic Adamski design followed immediately after the cigar in the same direction, apparently in pursuit.

Also in Japan in 1975 a cigar was photographed in Nagoya, Japan. It was seen to be launching and recovering many small round objects over Nagoya city. They were seen on closer scrutiny by the witnesses to be classic flying saucers.

On the 12th Sept 1975 a large group of similar flying saucers were seen, similar in profusion to the ones launched by the cigar returned to Nagoya city. Better photographs of the mass appearance of craft were obtained.

Contemporary cigar Sightings

Another classic cigar-cylinder film comes from Hagen, Germany, taken June 4th 1980 by a Mr Marrs Dommin. It moved slowly and deliberately changing direction several times in the sky. Here it is seen at the classic 45 degree angle. No balls/discs were seen being released in the footage available to FSR. However the object is comparable to more recent footage taken over London in the past year.

At the heart of crop circle country, Marlborough in Wiltshire, England, a cigar like object was photographed releasing balls on 24th July 2002.

In recent months, and especially on September 14th 2003, there has been a profusion of multiple spherical objects filmed over London. A cigar object was first seen to separate into two parts over North-West London at 2pm.

This was followed by four hours of multiple small craft seen and filmed over London. It suggests a new era for organised observation of UFOs has arrived.

The July 29th London cigar sighting was pre-dated by a single photograph by Mr J Rose on Sunday 16th march 2003. Mr Rose photographed the object near Wormbourne, Wolverhampton. He was a previous UFO witness at least a dozen times.

Compare this object to the identical July 29th 2003 object over London.

The North London cigar object was observed to be flying vertically and then altering to 45 degrees before finally completing its flight horizontally. It had a projection resembling a hook out of the lower end. A shiny metal lead-coloured exterior matched the original French cigar report of 1952. The North London cigar performed a slowly tumbling weightless action, characteristic of repeated observations of paranormal objects.

On August 27th 2003 another matt-black cigar object was observed over London. It was described by a Mr Wragg as resembling two rolls of carpet covered in black plastic resting one on top of the other. Interestingly this may explain why the September 14th 2003 London cigar craft was observed to split into two halves. See the observer chain article on the back page of this issue.

Mr Douglas Wragg was based on the perimeter of Greater London; Petts Wood. He observed his cigar craft rise to approximately 20,000 feet. He is a retired aviation worker and aviation enthusiast. His judgement can therefore be considered experienced.

FSR comment: His observation can be used to discount the solar balloon, a modern novelty kite, being responsible for these sightings. These are not pressurised balloons and cannot believably take on the controlled complex aerial manoeuvres in the buffeting air speed present at this altitude.

In comparing the object's movements: the level of control does not resemble a tethered kite in any way. The behaviour resembles the scale of movement undertaken by a conventional aircraft moving large distances in their approach along their set flight path. If they are un-tethered they cannot be controlled. If tethered, how could such a tether cope without snagging on buildings, trees, power lines and masts as the object horizontally traverses to a far lower angle on the horizon? The context of these cigar sightings is contemporary (since the mid 1990's) to multiple small UFO craft routinely seen by repeater witnesses over London. We suppose that it is necessary for these spherical and saucer-shaped objects hypothesised in this article to be dropped into this specific city zone by much larger support vessels.

When small saucer-like objects appear we should be immediately looking for evidence of continuity sightings of much larger support vessels. This is a job for an observer chain to help us catch the complete picture. (see Vol.48 No3). A final speculative observation is that cigar craft appear to spend a lot of time on an angle of trajectory near 45 degrees. Is this related to a specific force wave cut into the Earth's magnetic field? Observations also have these objects stretching as they move and also blurring as if they are spinning on their longitudinal axis. These craft must be producing huge standing magnetic waves to do this. We could follow their hidden movements by looking for electrical anomalies reported along their flight path. For such large craft, flying cigars are extremely fast and are capable of being picked up in a few individual frames of film travelling through clusters of spheres and saucers.

The final 2003 British sighting occurred over Glasgow City Centre on 6th September 2003. Mr McVey noticed out of the window, while returning to the city centre by bus, a strange object high up in the sky "it was just sort of hanging there. It didn't seem to be going anywhere, but it looked like it was rotating, albeit very slowly and a little irregularly. This object appeared to be long and thin, but not cylindrical. It was relatively dark greyish. Not really metallic, but quite matt. Nonetheless it appeared to catch the sun when it rotated. The weather that day was sunny with a few very broken-up clouds; there was a slight breeze at ground level, and you could see the clouds sailing by quite freely. So, there's no way it could have been a balloon - it would surely have gotten blown away otherwise."

The most recent London cigar picked up on the observer chain system was on 13th January 2004. It was travelling eastward over London around noon time. It was a classic dark "Adamski" cigar shape, was clearly observed entering a single well-broken cloud, and was not seen to leave. It was seen travelling under the cover of darkness over the city the following evening.

Clearly there is unusually intensive U.K. cigar activity. We can but speculate what reasons there are for such a strong presence of the cigars in our skies. The re-emergence of the U.K. as a leading powerbroker on the world stage? Would world political events explain the similar Japanese cigar wave of the mid1970s?

Is UFO observation of world events too simplistic an approach?

A confident speculative approach is used as the main thrust of this article; it suggests that flying cigars are a major strategic centre of alien activity and therefore crucial to our civilian monitoring programs. The following article suggests the list of activities may include dropping specialist covert aliens, "sojourners" amongst our modern civilian population. How close do they feel to you? ■

Meetings with compassionate human-like aliens. Part 1: A contact with sojourners in the U.S.A. By Harry Challenger.

FSR Presents New Humanoid Contact Cases.

The objective of Flying Saucer Review is to present new landmark global contact cases for the purposes of detailed consideration, and thus to organise this precious first-hand material into a resource for a coming generation of future contact specialists - ordinary people like you and me.

In this issue and forthcoming editions of this journal, the New World of contact cases contemporary to our era will be highlighted. FSR is the key to continuous access to the world reports of aliens seen at close quarters. The only opportunity anywhere to read a substantive content of detailed news concerning alien contact, in a complete and analytical format.

When hearing of new cases involving open dialogue with aliens, some of these cases will not involve any obvious UFO or its occupants seen disembarking, rather the existence of the alien among us; covert aliens in our midst, concealed in ordinary daily lives.

The following case considers such a recent contact with two very perceptive human-like aliens. This event occurred near the westerly border of the U.S.A. and Canada. The year was 2001, the principal witness, Lisa, a 40 year-old mother of one, who met the two human-like aliens in an every-day casual environment: a bar-restaurant. This case is transcribed in the first person.

On the night of September 6th 2001, I walked into a bar at The Golden Mum, a Chinese restaurant in Bremerton (in Washington State in the U.S.A.). I sat at the bar and was feeling a bit distressed because of a personal situation that had just occurred. I immediately became aware of two people sitting directly behind me.

One was a man about 43 with a light blue bandanna, he had a somewhat square jaw, striking icy blue eyes and his skin was sun-kissed in colour. He was wearing a blue sweatshirt and jeans. He looked quite military in his posture and mannerisms.

The woman was around 35 with short dark hair, thin with fairly light skin, wearing a blue skirt and top. She was feminine and small-boned with elfin features. She had a very sweet and gentle nature about her.

I became interested in their conversation for some reason unknown to me, for at first their conversation seemed ordinary. They were talking about other people they knew. The woman seemed to be immediately receptive to my observation. I was silent, they started speaking, and I noticed the conversation changing.

Suddenly the conversation switched and she began interpreting my thoughts for him. Whatever I said in my head she would repeat to him as a psychic interpreter. I was the active one (only telepathically) and they were the receptive ones, answering verbally to one another. I was sitting at the bar and they were located directly behind me.

She seemed to be the one with the real talent as far as I could tell, but who knows what knowledge he may have had. She began talking about me. At first said she felt that I was a good person, but the man said my energy level was low. I spoke back to them mentally that I had been partying the night before and that was why. She immediately said "she was partying the night before and that was why her energy level was low".

She found me somewhat attractive, as if she liked the inner me, but the man said he had no interest in anybody on this rock and he wasn't interested in my body type anyway. I took this to mean he wasn't into people from planet Earth. She seemed to want me to go somewhere with them but the man was opposed to the idea.

She said I had a good soul and was a good person. The conversation was so detailed it was beyond chance that it wasn't meant for me. I told her psychically that this was great material for song writing, since I'm in a rock band and I will have to write a song about this experience. She repeated this back to the man. She told him that I was in some kind of rock group.

I psychically told her a little about the band members and she told the man about that too. He began actually describing each one's personality and essence. The woman was translating to the man word for word what I was consciously and deliberately saying in my head. Whenever we talked about the men in my life, he would seem to begin to translate what their essences were and what concerns or objective thoughts he had about them. This was after the woman initially translated my thoughts first into words.

He seemed to take an interest in our ex-drummer, Michael. He said that he stood out and seemed to think there was something special about him. He was concerned that he might go over to the dark side.

Michael died from the effects of his life of excess, including regularly using methadone, a year and a half later. He had been the female witness's ex-partner. In his last few months Lisa tried to make him get treatment. He had been very bleak, read Satanist literature and was regularly contemplating suicide in his letters. "Even though I didn't want to be near him towards the end of his life, I felt as if I should be because of what these beings had said about his dark side. I also had begun to pray for him."

The woman again mentioned that she wanted me to go with them and he said, "you really want her to go don't you?" His tone actually changed and he seemed to warm up as he said this. He was prone to think the star-base at North Star wouldn't be too pleased with the idea. The main place they spoke of was the North Star system. The man mentioned the star base and the North Star system a couple of times.

I telepathically told the woman that I did not want to leave without my son. (He was 17 years old at that time). She told the man what I had said out loud. The woman said I would only go to the North Star system if I could take my son too. His reply was that my son was an observant type, but a thief.

In fact he had been arrested for shoplifting as a minor and had also stolen from Lisa on occasion. However there was no further stealing following this event, although some dishonesty persisted in his behaviour.

The man seemed to dismiss the human race and seemed to have zero tolerance or interest in humans. He said something about them just being toys or boring creatures.

I got sick of his arrogant attitude after a while and I asked, "If you're so unimpressed with the human race, and if you're so great and so high above us, it surely doesn't come through because your arrogance is very human." He seemed to like that.

This psychic conversation lasted for about 20 minutes. I could hear them perfectly and see them perfectly well too because the woman was sitting 1 foot away and the man was sitting across the table from the woman. I chose my words carefully and observed what I was thinking and how I was thinking it. She would always repeat everything I thought, verbatim. They spoke without a noticeable accent, although it was clear they were both educated.

They had drinks on the table but no food. I never saw them sip anything. Come to think of it, I don't remember them moving their bodies except for their mouths. At one point I turned and looked at them and said out loud," this is the most interesting conversation I've ever had." The man responded verbally with, "I bet." Latterly I started talking philosophically to change the subject, just to verify for myself even more that this was really happening. They rolled right along with it.

She really liked me, the inner me. He said at one point to his companion, "you really like her a lot don't you?" At the end of the conversation the man seemed to like me a bit more than the beginning. I think I amused him.

Towards the end of our communication I finally got up enough nerve to physically go over to them. As I turned around to approach them they were instantly gone and my heart began racing. I got up and looked outside but I saw them nowhere.

I went up to the bar and asked the bartender if she had ever seen them before and she said maybe a couple of times. I began to question others in the bar about the two people, then I suddenly freaked out. I thought two people who were sitting at one table were somehow like the two people who had just left. There was a similar energy about them. They just got up and left when I broached the subject with them. I must have sounded like a nutcase, or else they were simply hiding. Strangely, these two new people didn't appear to be freaked out by me at all. Although I had just had a highly unusual experience, and I think my boundaries were still unclear. I wasn't fearful - I was energised.

After I left the place I cried out on the street for those people to please come back. Hopefully they will someday soon. I still almost cry when I think of the experience, I long to meet her again. I cried so hard when they left. In the meantime, what am I to do? I often feel weary of this world and the mundane. Everything in my life feels mundane compared to this experience I have had. I talk to those who seem receptive. I often feel that I no longer fit in on this rock. I wish they had taken me with them.

Discussion.

This strikingly frank contact account describes the actions of two human-like aliens. The male could be described in classic ufological terms as a Nordic alien - a typically robust stern -looking male of Scandinavian appearance. The female is far more elfin and slightly built. She is notably similar in appearance and psychic abilities to another female alien described in part 2 of this article. There has been a steady flow of such sightings of these delicately boned, very slim human-like aliens. No deliberate thread grouping of such reports has been attempted. Perhaps this alien woman is derived from an entirely separate race of origin to her companion.

The idea of an alien civilisation based at the North-star may be familiar to some of our more experienced FSR readers. In the early 1960s a young man known as Edwin W. reportedly had a South African based contact with an extra-terrestrial race called the Koldasians. While working with modified radio apparatus in Pine Town near Durban he was introduced to a covert alien posing as a normal work colleague known as George K.

This colleague soon revealed himself to be a human-like alien called Valdar, claiming his origin from the region of Polaris, the Pole star. Like many other early era contacts, the content of the case can be viewed as somewhat eccentric. In spite of these shortcomings, in this wonderful quote from early in the Koldas case there are words allegedly spoken by the alien to illuminate us to the concept of the covert alien visitor.

The most remarkable thing Valdar said was, "If only you Earthlings knew how many visitors from space are among you, you would be very surprised." He said that nearly every country is visited by them. All these space-visitors are volunteers, who are first thoroughly trained in the language and customs of the country they are to visit. When they are landed in some secluded spot they are met by people who have also been prepared for their arrival. Then they live and move among us, sometimes for years. Obviously, they have to hide their true belief in extra-terrestrials anyway. It is also made easy for them by the fact that they can make themselves identical to us.

It is evident that these two modern human-like aliens encountered in the bar did indeed blend in completely anonymously alongside the other regular bar customers. It was as if they were trained to be this unremarkable. They were persons accustomed to roaming, familiarisation and concealment within our culture. For example, there was no clarification needed when told Lisa told them she was in a rock band. It is for this reason we call them sojourners, day trippers. This case has direct resonance with George Adamski's statements, also born in the first era of alien contact. After initially having his thoughts read in the streets of New York, he received a startlingly similar introduction from a covert alien visitor. In those early years of the UFO era, former Air Marshal Sir Peter Horsley also reportedly claimed to have met a covert alien, called Janus, living among us.

Mr Janus appeared to rely on human assistants while he carried out his operations here. An established alien skill appears to be in appropriating ideally receptive individuals: contact pre-selection. Covert aliens are rather like those who work undercover in espionage. Revealing themselves even to sympathetic individuals will effectively expose them and blow their cover. The objective in the initial contact revelation is to convert the genuine heart-stopping fear of the aliens reality into a powerful new bond of trust. Therefore we must analyse all these reports of interactions in order to define and evaluate what innate process cultivates this apparent pre-selection and trust.

If it is to be our position to believe this trust is based on a genuine case for mutual respect, then we must study the human-like aliens for evidence of their advanced emotional senses. They are often reportedly fluent with emotional matters of the heart and mind, as in Lisa's contact case. Somehow there is an immediately intense non-verbal connection, a reassuring sense of belonging in their presence. Rather like the intense sense of well-being, tainted by loss, we all remember with our first love. No wonder many alien contactees are driven to relentlessly searching, for a life time after such an experience, rather like searching for a lost love.This overwhelming sense of a deep bond partly rests within the nature of the alien contacts them selves. Reportedly, most aliens are doing all their talking directly into human minds. Are we mistaken in believing that their capacity for creating an intimate presence within our thoughts is a basis for rapidly establishing mutual trust? Should we trust them just because they can tell us hidden facts about ourselves? Should we be resisting them, as they may be inducing an entirely false experience of brotherhood and loyalty in us?

Lisa felt confident enough to argue her point of view with the male alien because there was a strong mutual trust evolving from early on in the encounter. Perhaps this secret bond of trust is even more finely balanced. Remember the ultimate danger we must pose to their safety. They risk many lives and liberty by revealing themselves in this way.

These alien beings in the bar seemed to express a fundamental need to understand the human condition. The emotional sensitivity of the female cannot be over-emphasised in this case. She was a truly compassionate human-like alien. She appeared to utilise a distinctive form of emotional psychic reading. That is, to read peoples' life experiences in their absence, perhaps by making the witness briefly remember and hold them in a mental picture.

The Nordic male contrasted strongly in his superficial emotional detachment. He appeared trained for a more authoritative role. Perhaps he was merely an escort for the elfin female alien. He was, however, in the company of a humane and sensitive observer, which must colour our negative impressions of him. He may well also have been playing devil's advocate to evoke or study a specific human response. Is this dismissal for this rock, our planet, genuine? Is so comprehensive a dismissal of our civilisation an initial ruse by the male alien? Was Lisa to be the subject of a form of spontaneous provocative testing? In fact, the many open disclosures and the straight talking are highly unusual.

If there ever was a human-alien contact protocol, this encounter must surely have broken all the rules. We now know of a named alien destination: North Star. It is surprising how few plausible alien destinations exist after 50 years of gathering reports. This specific recognisable location is where they intended to report back to. Having a named home is a central tenet for them holding a genuine alien identity.

The female alien offers a compassionate hearing of Lisa's innermost thoughts, without a feeling of intrusion, judgement or an obvious threat. She offers a great deal of personal comfort to Lisa, made recognisable in the intensity of her loss when they suddenly leave. This shared emotional link may be the reason for the female alien's ultimate gesture: an offer of a ride home to North Star.

Was this a genuine trustworthy offer? Was she to be made aware of this trip being a two-way ticket, or may she have been allowed to walk blindly into the daunting prospect of full alien cultural naturalisation? Clearly, Lisa had an inkling of the possible permanence and limitations of such a rash action, by asking for her son to be taken with her. It was these strong family ties that finally prevented her from immediately endorsing the offer. The methods of persuasion were gentle and apparently trustworthy, based solely on a voluntary agreement.

This contact story is further evidence of the natural tendency of some aliens to trust in civilians. We are the foremost equivalent of the neutral territory they appear to want to meet on. We tend to see them simply on their own terms, without resorting to any hidden agendas. We just react to them in a literal and open way. It is evident that a civilian may end up representing us in a chance diplomatic opportunity of the future. How many of us would grasp the diplomatic potential of such an open introduction such as that experienced by Lisa? How many of us would take up an offer of hospitality from these two representatives of an alien civilisation?

It never ceases to impress: the reasonable tone taken by ordinary citizens when shocked and confronted by alien contact situations. There rests among all these important cases involving human-like aliens a feeling of growing precedence. Lisa experienced twenty minutes of knowing what sharing her life with aliens may be like. In reality the true reason for the success of this close proximity encounter was the combination of a perceptive witness with two aliens who were experienced and familiar with our culture. It is therefore to be inferred in this article that we can all benefit by becoming similarly acquainted with the ways of visiting aliens. FSR will continue to provide you with such a framework.

The human-like alien visitors were acting as messengers with regard to the reality of human suffering present in Michael, Lisa's ex-partner. Afterward there was a permanent change in her behaviour towards this person, Michael, who was destined to suffer greatly.

How often do we recognise a simple act of kindness as a valid observation of alien behaviour? The second part of this article again considers a case that has a similar representation of a human-like alien acutely observing human suffering. Again there is evidence of direct intervention by compassionate human-like alien. ■

Meetings with compassionate human-like aliens.
Part 2: A Contact in the U.K. By Harry Challenger.

The following important contact case took place in Reading, England, around Easter 1991, at a site known as White Knights Lake. An account comes from 'Andrew' who was in higher education in Reading at that time.

The beginning of his story arises in mid-1990 when Andrew experienced repetitive bouts of sleep paralysis dreams, accompanied by a rapidly rotating whooshing sound, rather like the sound of the blades of a Chinook helicopter. There was often a peculiar sense of pressure on top of the head, which later became known as the "energy plunger". A startling incident occurred around three months before the main body of this contact started.

Andrew was standing in a friend's flat in Balham, South London, when he heard a female voice suddenly say loudly and clearly next to him "They are O.K. at the moment". Andrew was stunned by this simple sentence, seemingly arising out of the air.

Immediately before Easter 1991, Andrew was to be shocked again. He was confronted by a startling revelation while in conversation with two fellow students. "Do you get the dream where you are paralysed and get the whooshing sound"? Andrew was immediately linked up with these two uncanny fellow students who made their revelation to him. Both had undergone exactly the same alarming nocturnal experience. The students were Corn and Steven.

One Saturday evening in the late spring, as Andrew was discharged from an inner ear department at a local hospital outpatient facility, he was overcome by the sight of the setting evening sun. He felt an overwhelming longing to be at the nearby White Knights Lake as evening sunset drew in. He quickly proceeded there with both his new friends. The following incidents are recounted in the third person.

We arrived at White Knights Lake when it was already late dusk. Our intense anticipation marked a definite feeling that we were here to see something revealed to us. On this, the first occasion of our mutual visit, it was going to be an astonishing night.

From right to left, as we faced the dark water of the lake, we heard splashing. The figure of a woman came along in a flowing white dress. She was running on top of the lake. She covered the distance of the lake surface, all the while making little splashes with her feet. She appeared to be frantically looking about her, especially over her shoulder, as she continued running.

We were fascinated by this unsettling, yet dramatic, image of a running woman. She was by now our shared secret. The thought of her was thrilling, and compelled us to return the same time again the following week.

So the next weekend we arrived at the area by the lake, in the quiet of the late evening. On this occasion the area seemed to be buzzing with static energy. A strange cloud approached us across the lake, resembling a snowstorm of miniature hexagons hidden in rainbow colours. The little shapes were less than a centimetre in size and formed a single layer like the snowstorm of a bad T.V. signal.

I walked up to the cloud as it came to a halt. The hexagon-like particles now enveloped me. I suddenly became aware that there was a flash of blue movement to my right. A woman dressed in a blue one-piece body suit was wrapped up within the energy field with me.

She had shoulder length brown hair and was about 5 foot six inches tall. I felt as if she was, overwhelmingly, a familiar friend I have always known. She gave me a friendly greeting in her facial expression. I looked forward at this point, for my vision was now drawn to two figures of naked people. They too approached directly towards us, coming in off the water like the other cloud.

I began to feel the familiar wave of the energy plunger on my head, and rocky sorts of wave energy all around me. I turned around and looked for my two friends. My friend Corn appeared physically paralysed and had all but lost any attention to his surroundings. I dropped my hand rapidly to his shoulder and dragged him away from the bank. He seemed to come around at that point and go into a blind rage from panic.

I initially resisted the tremendous pull and was suddenly gripped in my own panic. I recoiled from the continuous unnatural sensation of being pulled out of my body. The rolling thunderous whooshing sound came over us, growing to crashing crescendo all around. It appeared to me as pulling our heads upward while the body and its whole awareness of gravity gradually diminished.

We were now going up through some sort of tunnel. My friend Steve appeared to get caught a number of times in what I can only call blockages, on the way.

We could still feel the night air and see the night sky above us. It definitely felt like we were still outdoors. However, now our surroundings resembled a sort of banked seating arrangement, like an amphitheatre. A tall figure of a man stood in front of us. He appeared to be some sort of overseer. He was wearing a medieval style cloak and something resembling a skullcap on his head. His great stature was more than seven feet tall, as was that of the distinct group of a dozen or so figures sitting towering behind him on the raised benches. I could only describe them all as having awesome authority. They appeared to be in conference when we appeared. I could hear their echoing voices.

I now noticed that two of these men wore strange devices on their heads and were operating some kind of light technology around Corn. It was like a network of pipes of pure light energy. He was still held in a cold motionless trance. I felt very uneasy; I said out loud, "What do you want? Why are we here?". The overseer looked at me and motioned "shhhh".

I noticed that the woman from inside the hexagons was now standing near me again. She was now holding what appeared to be an open book. I said to her, while looking at the figures surrounding Corn, "What are their names?" Perhaps this was so I could get their attention and finally get to intervene with whatever they were doing to Corn. The woman in blue pointed her hand to one of the figures and said, "His name is John". "John" then looked up from what he was doing, and raised an acknowledging glance towards me.

The woman drew my attention to a large screen to my side and told me she would show me something important. Images of many, many other peoples' lives flooded through. Countless hundreds of images comprising thousands of individuals were represented as being recorded in this way. Except now they were transformed into two distinct groups of people. One of these two groups consisted of those who were facing the current suffering within humanity. The other group were portrayed as those people unaffected.

The woman indicated to me that Corn was part of that human suffering. It would be a crucial life experience for me to be aware of this suffering in others. I was given the impression that I was already intimately familiar with extraordinary suffering somewhere in an alternative existence already within me. This I took to mean; a previous role in another life. It was for me to see in others that which I have already known.

Within two years I sat watching Corn stricken and dying in hospital from organ failure. Drawn to his side by a nurse, I was still so under-prepared for this, and disbelieving, despite having had a prophetic vision of his suffering.

Discussion.

The content of these two reports suggests human-like aliens are indeed capable of considering emotional issues affecting humans. The representative of the compassionate human-like alien in this second encounter is the female in the blue jump-suit. She was in the company of very tall humanoids. These much taller males did not show any obvious evidence of a mental or emotional attachment to Andrew.

The entire contact episode was preceded by the sensation of whooshing and being dragged through a wind tunnel. This suggested that the three witnesses had likely undergone a retrieval by a flying craft. If this hypothesis holds true, then the amphitheatre was an internal environment readily adaptable for continuity with night scenes outdoors.

The tall humanoid operators of the light technology observed by Andrew, which was used on Corn, clearly did not cure him. Despite identifying people with human fragility in both cases, the aliens offered no remedy or intervention.

The projector screen is a frequent and familiar happening during onboard encounters. Are these "life lessons", in both cases in fact a deliberate testing of human reactions? Once we are confronted with the emotional stimulus, are we being measured? What dimension or measure of ourselves are they after?

There follows on from this line of questioning an elaboration on the apparent selective testing of human reactions. The literal interpretation of many contacts that bring messages of catastrophe and end-time predictions have created a specific factional belief system within ufology. A ready example would be the case of Maximo Camargo in Panama in 1987. This classic dire warning case is taken from Albert Rozales Humanoid database.

One of the aliens asked him what form of communications did humans use on earth. Camargo answered what he knew; he said radio, television, phones, and newspapers. He was then told that humanity had not advanced to further stages since it had suffered innumerable cataclysms.

They also told Camargo that they had achieved an almost perfect spiritual level close to the divine, in which they had elected to remain. Humanity had not been able to achieve such a spiritual level yet.

The aliens then told Camargo, "We have known you since the time you were young" They also told Camargo that he would have to divulge a special message to humanity. They warned Camargo that in 24 years humanity was going to suffer another tremendous cataclysm in which life on earth will come close to extinction (2011). They were preparing themselves in order to save whomever they could.

Soon he was taken to a large shiny metallic door and then inside another room. There he saw two "rings", one larger than the other. Inside the smaller ring there was a small transparent sphere. Next to the sphere there were three shiny plaques arranged in a triangular formation. Each plaque had the number "666" engraved on it. He was told that this was the earth and its "accomplishments". He was told to go forth and spread the warning. He was then released back to the ground.

The dire warning cases are a direct challenge to us. How can we react in a constructive manner to this material? FSR has grappled in the last twenty years with such opinion, - based on whether the entire UFO subject is in fact a manifestation of the battle of the forces of light with those of darkness. Gordon Creighton, our late editor, spoke eloquently on the proper interpretation of this ancient worldview. The prevailing claim for ownership and control over humanity apparently comes from an unseen race already down here with us. Are the dire warnings a further expansion of the test scenario? Worse still, is this a helpful warning, or a vain human gullibility test?

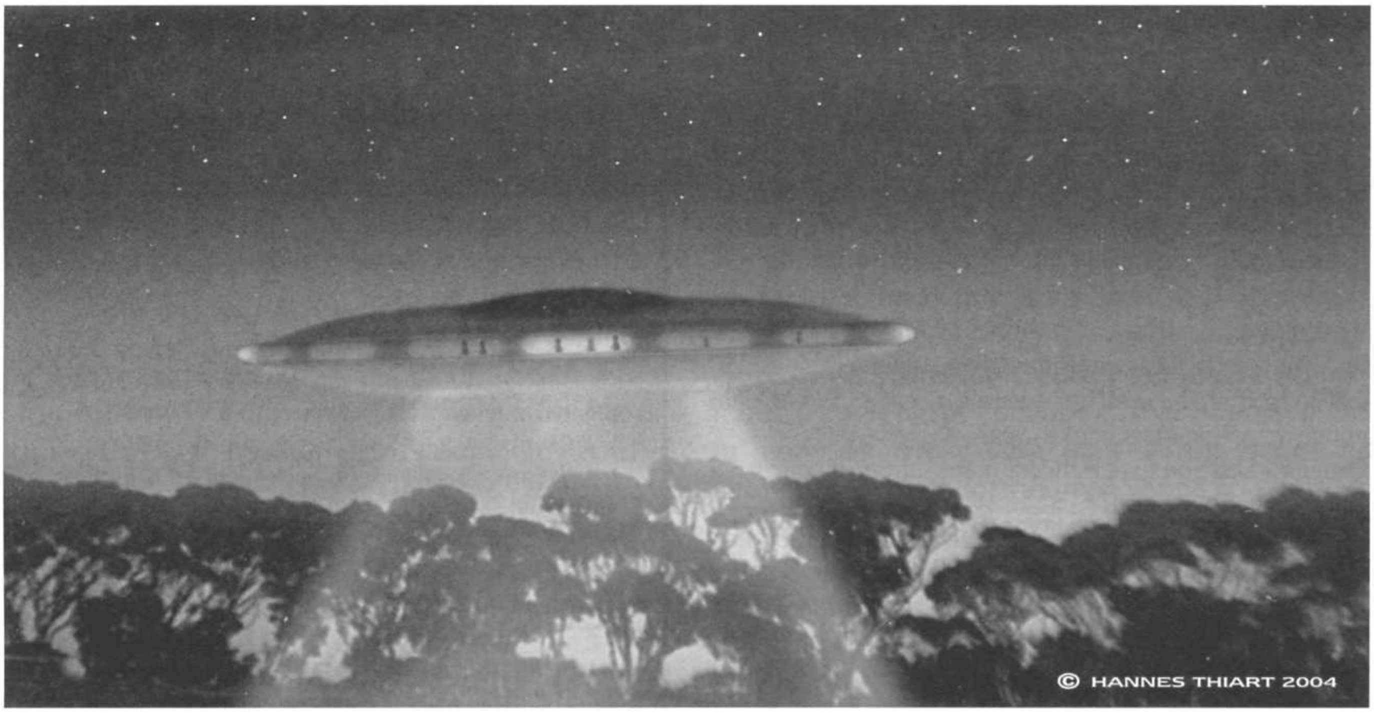
There are many speculative ways to theorise the human race's current isolation. Why are we contacted, only to be constantly re-examined and re-tested, by the outside alien intelligence? Is this evidence of an alien power exerting the force of its will on us? Why are they seemingly so intrigued by our civilisation's development; especially the continuing effect of our society's development on our thought processes?

What of the ancient view that describes a power capable of intervening in our daily lives, already residing here within our globe, rather than outside? Who are the very tall humanoids described in the amphitheatre? We can speculate that the ancient world would see them as modern day Nephilim. Previous Nephilim encounter cases, most notably from Israel, have appeared in contemporary issues of FSR. They have described the actions of a fearful race of humanoid giants who on occasion have reacted badly to both human and animal bystanders. These humanoid giants are well represented in contact literature.

The previous FSR (48.3) suggests a theory of our world being an embedded civilisation. We are a curiously insignificant isolated chattel in an enormously expansive super-civilisation, which we border yet know nothing of. Perhaps the total impasse apparent in our external communications is more than just our relatively primitive state in comparison with a super civilisation.

What if it is this super civilisation that has deliberately created our isolation? What if it has set up many of the design features that will effectively contain our human civilisation during its development? Is our assisted development to be orchestrated by them, and solely by them, without outside involvement? If an ancient non-human Earth race, such as the Nephilim, existed, it could be a leading dominant regional power. It could have a direct role in local enforcement, forbidding contact. Are we living in disputed territory? ■

Human-alien interactions in a family from Clare Valley N.S.W. Australia. Preliminary report by Omega.



The following important transcript concerns the experiences of a family who currently live in the Clare Valley, N.S.W. Australia. This transcript reveals the activities of very tall humanoid aliens in relation to this family. It is part of an ongoing field investigation of the long history of an alleged alien presence in the Clare Valley.

Omega: Before we continue with the event during the thunderstorm, may I touch upon the account you mentioned regarding the craft that you and your husband saw some years ago?

P: Certainly, it was near an area, on the Gorge road next to Rostrevor, in South Australia.

Omega: About how many years ago was this event, also could you describe the craft?

P: The year was 1987. My husband and I were driving along the Gorge road about 10 PM, when we noticed what we initially thought was a helicopter. The reason being,

There will be extensive monitoring of all global reports of these tall humanoid aliens in forthcoming issues of the FSR.

These are not the familiar Nordic aliens, but another separate group of entities known by some researchers as the modern- day Nephilim, or the Watchers.

In the words of the late Gordon Creighton, They are "those who were thrown down", in the Hebrew account of the Fall. The true nature of their kind can only be understood by observing the witnessed accounts of their interactions.

In this account we are faced with the prospect of a car stop with a possible abduction. These very tall humanoids appear to prefer to wear full body garments resembling wet suits, diving suits and hooded cloaks.

was the fact that we saw clearly, windows with people inside.

Omega: Was the craft internally lit and what shape were the windows?

P: The craft was internally lit. It seemed very bright inside. We could see three people at the window. The shape of the window was a flattened ellipsoid shape. There was only one window visible. The people inside seemed to be human. However, I could only see from their chest upwards. I did not see the complete figure. They seemed to be clothed in a nondescript manner.

Omega: How high from the ground was this craft?

P: It was just above the tree line, quite low.

Omega: When you realised that it was not a helicopter, could you give an alternative description of the craft?

P: It seemed to be saucer-shaped, very smooth. Two pie plates would be a good description, with one long window in the middle.

Omega: Did the craft make any sound, also did you experience any electrical malfunction with the car?

P: We did not hear any sound. We stopped the car and just looked at the craft for several minutes. We did not notice any anomalies with the car.

Omega: Did you experience any sensation in your head when viewing the craft?

P: No. We drove off and didn't think much of it after that.

Omega: May I now take you back further to the event in the thunderstorm. Could you give me a specific date at all?

P: At first, I thought it was 20 years ago, now I am thinking it must have been 25 years ago.

Omega: What type of car were you driving at the time of the event?

P: It was a Ford XP 20...purple with red interior, if that helps any.

Omega: What type of tree was struck by lightning, and could you describe the damage to the tree?

P: It was a Gum tree. What I found unusual was the very jagged nature of the split. Usually, when a tree is hit by lightning, it is sheered off with the explosion of the voltage. This was very jagged and where it was hit was only a couple of feet from the ground.

Omega: Was there any precipitation at the time of the strike?

P. There was a storm warning; we could see the lightning in the distance and it just started to rain lightly.

Omega: If we could now go to the subject of the 'men' you saw through the window. You mentioned that they were tall and had jump-suits on. How could you evaluate the men being tall? Could you please give more details of the jump-suit?

P: Well, the men seemed to be bending down and looking down on us through the windows. We could only see their shoulders and their head. As for the jump-suits, I already mentioned the 'bubble paper' texture and that it was dark green.

The only exact description I can give regarding the style of the suit is, it is exactly the same as sports people

http://www.thelosthaven.co.uk

FSR will continue to follow the global situation by consistently representing international reports of human - alien contact cases. Albert Rosales a citizen of the U.S.A. has made the gathering, translating and collating of such reports his lifetime endeavour.

FSR is proud to be associated with a hardworking pioneer of a new more complete global humanoid contact history.

The reports that follow are part taken from his International Humanoid Contact Database. Research archives make sense if we are to stay keenly objective. How we turn these key observations into the evolving framework of our understanding is through strong speculative articles.

What makes FSR different is that it dares to look at the centre of the phenomenon: What the alien intelligence is seen to be doing; What acts do they give priority; how their technology appears to operate; the context of places and witnesses where they have been seen.

We are not keen to dwell on peripheral human distractions or - as often happens in our field - end up studying each other. Researchers writing about other researchers takes way too much airtime. FSR wishes to represent to you the best humanity has to offer.

wear now, when running at a sporting fixture. Of course, this fashion is in vogue now but then, no one had ever seen such a suit.

Omega: Could you now refine the detail of the men i.e. age, skin colour, also facial hair?

P: Thinking back, the skin was of a lighter nature rather than dark. The eyebrows were very light in colour. I could see that they must have had ears under the jump-suit because I could see the shape of the ears under the suit. The age of the ''humans' would be about 30 years old. They did not have any distinctive features at all, rather bland I would say. They did have dark eyes, though.

Omega: How long did they stay there for?

P: They were there for as long as we could remember. You see, we couldn't remember anything after that. We could not remember going home and, as I mentioned, we slept all of the next day.

Omega: Would you say you had an affinity with entities? Also have you seen entities in your house at Burra?

P: Now that you mentioned that link, thinking back around that time , I saw a 'monk' standing by my bed at the house. It would have been around the time of the thunderstorm. It was in the middle of the night.

Omega: Did this ' monk' convey any message to you? Also could you see his face?

P: I could see that he was lit up on one side, could not see his face. I think that the light was from the light in the hallway. He seemed to have a hood on with a long flowing robe. That was all I could see. What he did say to me was "I am for he who falters". Now that I think of it, all this may be linked to the sightings of the men because it was around the same time. Instead of monks and men, these could be entities from elsewhere. ■

A VERY DISTURBING TREND - A special FSR report.

In a recent conversation with Albert Rosales, compiler of the database, he revealed a disturbing new (2004) rise in humanoid predator reports; Albert suggested that the initial rise in his data has been building up steadily since 1995.

The humanoid predator is a loose definition used by FSR to describe humanoid alien creatures, which are increasingly observed to behave as carnivorous animals and prey on livestock and pets. More alarming is that they often exhibit similar stalking and hunting behaviour when encountered by human beings.

The return of Mailbag, our letters forum, to the next issue of FSR, would be an ideal way for readers to express their opinions on this unsettling new phase of "demonic reality" among the alien visitors. Demonic reality is a guarded term which could account for such creatures' ability to remain uninjured, for example when shot at, or hit by cars. However, this talent for invulnerability matches well with 'conventional' alien accounts in other encounter reports.

These 'beings' are all the more terrifying and 'demonic' because the animal component of the body contrasts with certain recognisably human facial features. A classic representation of the demon is an animal mutated with a human form. The most striking new alien animal tales speak of wolf-like winged beasts flying into farm compounds to prey on farm animals. Winged human beings have also recently been seen that glide menacingly in the sky and among the trees. The very sight of them has terrorised witnesses.

The claws, sharp canines, blood sucking apparatus in the mouth, fur, and wolf-like features must arouse some of our deepest human fears held since we were primitive hunter-gatherers. We are seeing the modern equivalent of our fear of sabre-cats that predated early man, until their extinction at the end of the last ice age.

Some recent reports are provided here to gain a more current insight as to the alarming and ferocious manifestations of these creatures. The cultural superstition embedded in Hispanic culture would not likely lead to such close corroborative descriptions in many of these sightings. What began as sporadic local reporting ten years ago, or the brief notorious appearance of John Keel's Mothman forty years ago, is spreading.

We expected to meet only intelligent aliens in this, the first era of contact reports. Now only the animal instinct in these savage hunters is readily apparent. Let us hope they do not also possess intelligence in proportion to their savagery, or we may lose our human monopoly as the most dangerous animal on the planet.

Viluco, Chile, 05/01/04 Time: 05:15am Source: Juan Maulen, quoting La Cuarta Newspaper.

40-year old driver Juan Berrios was on an errand on Santa Filomena Street on his way to Las Vertientes terminal, when at about 70 meters in front of his car he noticed a strange figure standing on the middle of the road. He rubbed his eyes and then saw nothing and kept on driving, at about 5 meters away the bizarre figure again appeared. Stunned at what he was seeing, Berrios almost lost control of his vehicle as he swerved around the figure, almost upending the vehicle.

The strange creature had what appeared to be the carcass of a bloodied dog clutched in his jaws. The creature suddenly jumped and disappeared into the brush. Berrios described the creature as about 1.50m in height, with large hind legs like a kangaroo, small curved front arms that ended in claw-like protrusions, a spiky dorsal fin on its back, and a tail resembling that of a rattler on a snake. The facial features were also bizarre; it had a wolf-like snout, several sharp rows of teeth, and fierce-looking red eyes. It jumped a height of about 5 meters and disappeared from sight.

21-year old police officer Leonardo Samaniego Gallegos was patrolling a section of Alamo Street, when he observed what appeared to be the figure of a woman totally dressed in a black cloak-like outfit descend from a nearby tree towards his patrol car.

She appeared to float towards the car at very high speed. She had large black eyes without any pupils. Terrified, he drove away from the area but was chased by the flying apparition. He called for assistance over his police radio. The tree the strange figure descended from was about 6 meters high. The strange flying creature approached the police car and impacted onto the front windshield, pushing it inward, apparently trying to get in using what appeared to be large pointy claws. At this point Gallegos lost consciousness.

In the videotaped interview, officer Gallegos describes the eyes and black gown as in the news article, but adds the description of a "helmet" or headpiece it was wearing that curved downward to a point at the back of the creature's head. Also, a police officer from Santa Catarina, Jorge Contreras, declared that he and two more policemen from the Regia police saw exactly the same flying being that officer Samaniego saw; but three days before. They saw it flying and decided not to say anything, until they heard about Samaniego's case. Norma Alicia Herrera who lives in Colonia La Playa declared in a TV interview that she and her brother also saw the flying humanoid at daytime and that it looked weird. She said that her brother was so stunned by the sighting that he was sick for almost a week afterwards. Another neighbour in that sector also videotaped, several days before, a strange flying humanoid, and gave the video to the TV station.

Maria Luisa and Fernandez Morales, residents living in the of the city reported that an unknown creature killed at least 50 of her hens, which she kept in her backyard. The witness, who sold chickens for a living, heard a loud ruckus coming from the pen and ran out, only to confront a very strange creature similar to a "tiger", but upright and bipedal in nature, and emitting loud grunting sounds. According to the witness, the mysterious creature jumped over a wire fence and ran from the area, leaving a trail of blood behind. It only took several minutes for the creature to kill the chickens. Also, residents from the town of Texan Palomeque have reported seeing what they describe as a "wolf-woman", which has also killed and decapitated hundreds of chickens in the area.

Fajardo, Puerto Rico 03/02/03 Time: 02:00AM

70-year old Domingo Ramos awoke to the sounds of very loud commotion coming from rabbit cages. Looking out the window, he was stunned to see a bizarre winged bird-like creature with long wings and huge protruding eyes apparently "sucking" the blood out of the unfortunate rabbits. Ramos described the creature as about 5 ft tall that also attacked a goat, which it left wounded and weakened. Ramos yelled at the creature, which then rose up and flew away in an unknown direction. The terrified witness described the creature as having "semi-human" facial features. He notified the police in the morning. ■

2 New reports from Argentina

FARMER SEES UFO AND OCCUPANTS

Source: Diario El Tribuno (Salta, Argentina) Translation © 2004. Scott Corrales. Institute of Hispanic Ufology (IHU) Special thanks to Gloria Coluchi.

It all happened on the Tin Tin road on December 16, 2003 at midnight, some 120 km west of Salta, the gateway to Cachi, which crosses the Los Cardones National Park. "It was incredible. We could see an object with impressive lights, side by side, spinning in a circle at high speed. Then other lights appeared which came and went over the same spot. It made our jaws drop." These were the first words uttered by Julio Rafael Espinoza, a farmer and shepherd from La Poma.

In Cachi, on the Tin Tin road he travelled with 7 other people on a bus, among them a 5 year-old girl. That Tuesday, the passengers on the bus were Benito Salva and his father, Ricardo, and four other men, Espinosa and his young daugher Tamara, aged 5. The main witness to the events, Julio Rafael Espinosa, 39, told his experience to El Tribuno only last Friday.

All of them witnessed the strange and fantastic event. This location was not only the site of a new UFO sighting. This time, according to the eyewitness, the phenomenon was accompanied by the strange manifestation of humanoid creatures walking stealthily amid the scant vegetation of the Puna. At the entrance to the Tin Tin road, some 400 meters to the right in the direction of Cerro Negro, Benito Salva, the vehicle's driver, said: "Hey guys, look over there", before parking the bus, while the travellers looked through the window towards the indicated spot.

Espinoza says that he managed to climb on top of the bus, but curiosity got the better of him and led him to jump off and walk toward the luminous phenomenon. A stunning tale followed. "Upon reaching a bramble, in spite of the darkness, the landscape was very well defined. I couldn't go on any further.

I was moving away from the road and I was getting scared when my eyes started to see something that couldn't be made out clearly at a distance."

"There was a device measuring some 100 meters wide resting over some kind of struts or legs, which kept it some 10-12 meters off the ground. Some sort of hoses emerged from its middle, with lights on their tips. Suddenly, the lights on the object went out and these strange beings appeared. They walked slowly in single file, they were thin and their glow was so powerful they blinded me.

At that moment I hid behind a bramble and I could see when one of them jumped onto a bramble. I don't know how he did it and he began to pull pieces off it, as though taking specimens. "Some twenty minutes had gone by.

It was then that Espinosa decided to return to the truck to report what was going on. "When I told them what I'd seen, they told me that they couldn't see the creatures because they were very far away. However, they saw the luminous phenomenon, which was visible from the roadside," he concluded. ■

Human-like aliens observed taking a survey.
23/02/03 Las Pailas, Salta, Argentina.

Time: 0900am. Original Source: Gaceta Ovni, June 2003.

24-year old Milagros Linquin had gone into a rocky hillside in order to retrieve her goats, when she noticed a shiny object on the nearby hill. Close to the summit she noticed a metallic object similar to a bus, rectangular in shape with numerous visible windows and doors on one of its visible sides. She counted about 8 windows on the craft. The object appeared to be made out of a shiny metallic alloy, which reflected the rays of the sun.

Around the craft she noticed other shiny objects, square in shape, some bigger than the others. She counted about 14 of this square metallic "covers". At this point, her father, 74-year old Don Linquin came up and also noticed the shiny metallic object.

In the meantime Milagros had climbed a bit further and was now closer to the object. At this point both witnesses noticed several human-like figures wearing white tight-fitting garments moving around the object, apparently working on the shiny metallic covers or plates. There were about 6 figures in total. Don Linquin also noticed, a little further down from the summit, three additional human-like figures. These were dressed in black tight-fitting outfits, and appeared to be looking around and inspecting the surroundings. After about 30 minutes, Milagros climbed higher in order to approach the object and its "occupants" but when she did, the whole scene appeared to have vanished. Later, while checking the supposed landing site, a deep rectangular track was found on the ground. ■

Two New Reports of humanoid activity from Eastern Europe that convey an Environmentalist message.

Eastern Europe still appears to be having what could be called classic contact cases. That is, an encounter where there is an obvious landed disc on the ground with occupants who are dressed as crew-members. There is no ambiguity evident. These creatures look and appear as aliens on the ground. This endearing resemblance to the Western European and American classic reports of the 1950s and 1960s may be the result of many post-communist rural communities displaying their relative cultural innocence. Whoever these alien entities really are, they appear to recognise the right tone to play along with us. They follow the expectations of how an alien should act; the messages they convey are, shrewdly, simple ones.

Are these hopeful contact messages? Why are the aliens apparently talking about our lives to us, gently raising topics in casual conversation that may have great importance for us? Always, the detail of the message broadly relates to the capability of the witness.

The best hope is for us to gain knowledge of a clear alien intent, and to redefine the content of their communications with us. In the meantime we need to find more capable witnesses who are not presently accounted for in the globally gathered reports. It may well be the case that the working class, are far more likely to disclose an alien contact and worry less about maintaining reputations.

This is pure conjecture, however. Looking at the majority of the narratives of contact transcripts, aliens rarely elaborate unless prompted to do so by intelligent questioning. Here are two recent Eastern European cases that consider our potential environmental calamity during "conversation" with alien humanoids.

Humanoids land in Poland. (Szcecinek) 11/08/03 Time: 0500am. Taken with permission from 2003 Humanoid reports database by Albert Rosales, original report by Robert Lezniakiewicz, UFO Raport Poland.

Mr. Lech Hacinski was returning home from work when he noticed three figures apparently standing under a nearby railroad overpass. They appeared to be inspecting something on the ground, and immediately noticed as the witness' vehicle approached their location.

One of the "men" then left the others and walked to the middle of the road with one of its hands raised up. For some unexplained reason the witness was forced to stop the car as the human-like figure approached him. At this point the witness noticed that the three men wore round helmets and had large round black eyes. He could not see any other facial features.

One of them approached even closer and pointed an object, which flashed multicoloured lights, at the witness..

This humanoid then proceeded to contact the witness by using telepathy, and asked him several questions about his car and his manner of dress (apparently the witness had by now stepped out of the vehicle).

They asked him about the car's propulsion system and engine. The witness opened the hood of the car and attempted to explain to the humanoids how the engine operated.

Before leaving, the humanoids warned the witness that humans must preserve the earth's most precious resources, which they said were the water and the air. If not, extinction was sure to follow.

Before leaving, the witness asked the humanoids where their home planet was located. Their answer was sort of vague, but the witness understood something about "the eighth galaxy". The aliens also told the witness that he was the first earthling they had made contact with.

The aliens then floated to a nearby field where a huge dark round object rested on the ground. The bottom of the craft appeared to be surrounded by fog. The aliens disappeared into the craft, which then rose up and disappeared towards the west at high speed. On the field where the craft had landed a 50-meters-wide circle of flattened wheat was found.

Nocturnal alien visitor St Petersburg, Russia 09/11/00 Time 02:00AM Source: Gennadi Belimov, X-UFO Russia. Taken with permission from 2003 Humanoid reports database by Albert Rosales.

The witness, Alexi Tikhonovich, suddenly woke up in the middle of the night feeling an urge to inspect the house. He found everyone asleep and the house dark. Suddenly he saw a very tall figure standing by his bedroom door. He ran into his bedroom and grabbed a stick which he kept next to his headboard, at the same time asking the intruder how he got into the house?

The intruder, however, remained calm and told him not to be angry, that he believed in the same God. He then applied his right hand to the left side of his breast and said, "I have come in peace". Alexi could now see the intruder clearly and described him as a well built human-like figure, 2 meters in height. He was dressed in a tight-fitting one-piece grey suit that covered him all the way to his hands and neck. He had short hair of a shade difficult to describe, and an expressive face resembling that of a well-known Russian actor. The stranger seemed benevolent and curious.

Immediately Alexi relaxed and put the stick down. He then asked the stranger, "Where did you fly from"?

"From a distance" was the evasive answer. He then added, "We not only come here, but we go to all the different parts of the earth" "We have been studying humans for a long time" "We see how you have polluted your planet"

A little offended, the witness asked the alien if his planet was "cleaner" than the earth. His answer was a resounding yes, since they did not have such "terrible technologies" as the humans did. Growing bolder in his demeanour, Alexi continued to ask questions. The visitor told him that on his planet the average life span was over a hundred years.

He seemed interested in Alexi's everyday life and his method of making ends meet. When Alexi mentioned that he had served in the Army for 20 years and was receiving a pension, the visitor said that they did not have an army in his planet. Astonished, the witness asked the visitor how they dealt with any criminal element. He received a curious answer: "We exile them to other planets, there they learn to survive. "We teach our children well from a young age, we do not have homeless children like they have here on earth".

Alexi was also told that a large council comprising a group of "specialists" governed them. Alexi asked the alien how he had learned to speak Russian so well, but received no answer, only a curt smile. He then told Alexi that their main means of communication was through telepathy.

At this point Alexi realised that the stranger had not been moving his lips, that he had heard all the conversation in his mind. After 15 minutes the witness asked what type of technology they used to fly their ships. The stranger only said that they used different "measurements" in their technologies.

The stranger then walked towards the window and semi-squatted on the floor. Alexi was briefly distracted and had glanced away. When he looked back the stranger had disappeared. He only saw a fading light outside the window, that quickly vanished.

He approached the window and looked outside but everything was dark. After the stranger left, Alexi thoroughly inspected the apartment to make sure that his family was sleeping soundly. The next morning he realised that a small "welding torch" had mysteriously disappeared, perhaps taken by the stranger.

Only then did he tell his family of his strange encounter. For the most part their reaction was restrained. After the encounter Alexi was ill for five days and remembers the alien telling him that it was going to be so since they had different "bio-fields" that were sometimes harmful to humans. He added that the chemistry of humans "suffocates".

FSR Comment: A specific environmental awareness message was common to many old-time contact cases. Warminster Ufologist, the late Arthur Shuttlewood, once described his alien visitor looking up in surprise at a noisy passing passenger jet and then shaking his head in quiet resignation.

The conventional form of the alien message has undoubtedly lost its impact. Modern-day purveyors of cosmic messages for humanity face derision and hostility. The messages are still sporadically occurring however. FSR, as ever, takes note and moves on. ■

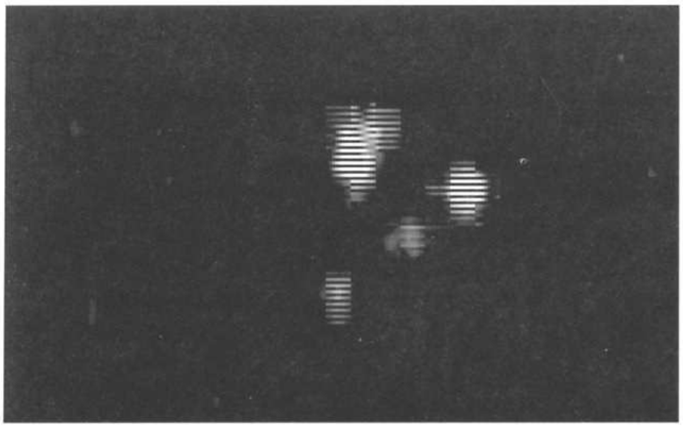
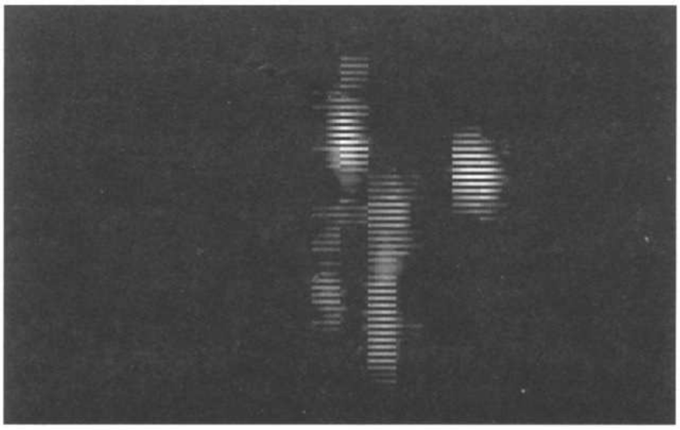
Night Time Triangle. The classic nocturnal appearance of a gigantic flying triangle, adapted from original artwork by Dave Bowden.

There is pressing evidence for believing 2004 will be the year of the flying-triangle, the hidden repercussions of which are being felt far across the globe. When witnessed close up, they are often a daunting fearful sight. Rather like the effect on the psyche of the monstrous dark silhouettes of WW1 Zeppelin they seem to evoke a deep emotional response. The UFO World has seen a trend evolve over recent years where these craft appear to break up into single light sources. Flying triangles and the similar flying rectangles may in fact be composed of a composite structure. They may contain a group of very much smaller craft which appear often to restructure themselves, perhaps even 'generating' part of their solid hull.





Flying triangle visits Central London. 13/01/04. Observer Chain. Filmed going over a balcony. The witness suddenly thought he would go outside. He was immediately attracted to a pulsing light similar to a dimmer-switch going up and down. "It just looked like a pulsing light made of strange colour." Above pictures are video stills. © M. Netherlands - Massive Flying Triangle 11/01/04 Source: Filers Files. ALMELO, Overijssel — A 47-year old witness was walking a dog outside on Sunday, January 11, 2004, around 8:15 PM, when he saw a massive triangle-shaped object. At the moment of the sighting the sky was very clear and the stars were very clearly visible. The huge triangle had red lights on each of the three corners. The witness states, "In the middle of the object there were five lights in a small triangle. There were three indigo-blue-coloured lights in the middle, and two red lights on each side. The wind blew suddenly very hard from another meters' distance and a height of also 250 meters' direction possibly, caused by the craft. There were no engine sounds.The craft moved slowly from the east to the west with two bright white sphere lights on top." The object was very big, much bigger than a jet. It was moving slowly at a constant speed of 30 km/h as it passed overhead. When the object had passed the witness, he noticed that above the object it had a hilly shape, and on top of that, 2 sphere-shaped bright lights. The sighting caused some psychological side effects: "I came home nervously and stayed in that condition for a couple of hours. I had a strange, restless feeling. During the sighting I was for a moment frightened, a kind of panic almost."

Canada — Black Triangular Craft With Green/Red Lights 25/12/03 Filers Files.

VANCOUVER — It was Christmas night, after 6 PM, and the witness was warming up his car when in the distance, above buildings, a very bright white light appeared. This light looked like a really big star, or a helicopter searchlight in the sky traveling north. As the object was above the small lake, I could now see the underside of the craft and I am positive that it was triangular in appearance, black/stealth in colour. The lights that I remember seeing were red/greens, they might have been blue, also. At this point, the craft had been travelling in a straight line, but after it had passed the lake and was almost straight above me, it veered left (east), and I am positive that a regular passenger plane would not act in this manner. I chased the object a few blocks and the triangular nature was evident still. The object was now hidden behind trees and I gave up the chase.

Triangle over Newfoundland, 17/01/04. Filers Files. ST JOHN, Newfoundland — There was an over-flight of the City on January 17-18, 2004, near midnight of a very large flying triangle craft. The craft was observed with large lights on each of three corners and a dimmer light was in the centre of the craft.

New York - Flying Triangle Enters Hudson River. 25/01/04, 4AM. Filers Files. NEW YORK CITY - A medical student reports seeing a large triangle shaped UFO at 4 AM, that hung over the Hudson River for about two minutes. It seemed to be searching for something, because there was a light-blue beam coming from the middle of it. "When I went to pull out my camera, it slowly lowered itself into the water. Many people saw this object besides me."

Louisiana - Flying Triangle21/01/04 07:50PM Filers Files. DERIDDER. Three witnesses spotted something weird, and their dog started barking. The witness noticed a flying triangle, with red lights on the points and white lights in the middle, in the western sky over Deridder. It was hovering and the air force planes were flying around it. I called my dad and told him to look at it. I just wanted to ask people, what is going on?

UK/England - Flying Triangle Disappears. Filers Files LONDON — On January 24, 2004, at 2 PM, a married couple saw three red lights in a triangle shape flying over. "As it got closer, it flew lower and my wife and I both saw it, so we drove to see if there was anything there. When we got there, there was nothing to see." London, England (Hackney).

Washington State - Flying Triangle 5/01/04 Source: Filers Files. WOODINVILLE, a suburb of Seattle - The eye-witness was at his computer on January 5, 2004, at 5:10 PM, when he was distracted by flashing lights outside. The object had a row or two of flashing white lights that were reminiscent of emergency lights, the kind that police vehicles use. These were white and seemed to be all over the craft that was moving south. It slowed to a stop and started going in reverse, northward. That was when I pointed it out to my girlfriend.

It then tilted one of its points towards us and started a lazy circle, revealing triangular lights on the bottom. At two apexes were alternating red lights, with the flashing white lights on the bottom. In the centre of the triangle was one slowly flashing larger red light. I could not discern a light at the third corner, but sometimes thought I saw a bright white light flashing there as well. It seemed that the pattern of flashing white and red lights changed as the craft moved in different ways. The craft had completed its circle and was hovering four blocks away.

It was about the size of a silver dollar at arm's length and hovering at about 300 feet altitude. It then rotated on its tail and rotated so that the "front" point was now level and facing north. It then picked up a lot of speed and flew out of sight. It accelerated very fast and was out of sight within four seconds.

At 5:13, I picked up my camera and immediately it came back into view, and hovered over the same area as before. I could hear the faint sound of a propeller plane, but it seemed very faint. After a minute, it began to move slowly back to the north. My camera's batteries were too low, so I could not get a picture.

Some neighbours were walking up the path from the parking lot as I tried to take a photograph. The man immediately commented that it looked like a UFO to him. Soon it picked up speed at an alarming rate and was gone again within seconds.

FSR Comment: Do these contemporary triangle sightings constitute a global triangle wave? The flying triangle and flying rectangles represent colossal objects in our skies. We have all been living in the long summer of our first UFO age. Many seem unworried by the almost continuous presence of such large craft over our cities; FSR begs to differ. ■

On the Nature of Consciousness. By Philip Creighton.

My current theory of consciousness is a very strange one. Essentially it is that it is a raw, elementary property of the psyche - just the capacity to be aware and experience - as opposed to what is is being experienced.

I also think that it not only is not material, but neither is it actually spatially or temporally localised. Under normal circumstances it is associated with, perceives, and expresses itself through our brains/bodies - and one mystery is just how this link operates.

But under unusual circumstances consciousness behaves independently of the brain/body. For example, out-of-the-body experiences, psychokinesis, and precognition are all more explicable if we postulate that consciousness is not intrinsically localised in what we call space and time.

Also, this theory provides a model to explain telepathy, direct, unmediated communication between different psyches.

I think our physical bodies are elaborate instruments which allow our psyches to operate in this material world while we are incarnate.

So, the search for the nature of consciousness becomes the search for the nature of the soul or psyche.

Apart from raw consciousness, there are so many properties of the mind/psyche which psychology has never been able to explain - the quality of primary perception, like colour, for example; capacity for meaning; intelligence; creativity; aesthetic appreciation, beauty, indeed all emotion.

So, I think, for example, that my psyche normally sees through my physical eyes - but it doesn't only see that way. In my "mind's eye" I can see things - which I never actually seen through my physical eyes.

Another theory I have is about our memory - which also has never been explained. We are so accustomed to the idea of recorded media, that we fancy our memory must work in the same way. But no evidence has ever been found for any recorded trace of memory in the brain.

Suppose that - there is no recorded trace. Suppose that our memory works in a totally different way - by time travel! We don't reckon our bodies can travel in time, but maybe our consciousness can... so memory is just revisiting an earlier brain-state. Then it becomes possible to explain precognition - in the same way - if we suppose that consciousness is not localised in the here-now.

People who have had various kinds of mystical experience, including the many who have reported near-death experiences, are quite certain that we actually live in Eternity. I too have had such experiences. They are by nature ineffable - you can't explain them in words or ordinary experience. I suggest that in this world, in our physical bodies, we - that is our conscious psyches - inhabit a restricted set of dimensions - we have to, to be able to operate here.

But actually our consciousness is not intrinsically limited to the set of dimensions which apply here, and sometimes it operates quite differently.

So, the proposition that consciousness is transcendental could lead to the answer to this mystery of all mysteries.

We have to distinguish between the observer and the film, and the typist and the typewriter - corresponding to perception and action.

If the observer leaves the room in which the film plays, they no longer see it, but each still exists.

If the typewriter is broken, no words appear, but that does not mean that the typist does not still exist.

I have another idea - which I arrived at through my tripping experiments. What I experienced was that we each carry around with us a construct, which I termed a "frame-of-reference", which is like an extension of our body image; it gives us the feeling of who we are, and our orientation in this world.

But the "frame-of-reference" can be temporarily shattered (it is shattered completely when we physically die?) by extreme conditions, use of drugs, illness of the body, and spontaneous mystical experience. When this happens to someone, typically they realise that they are not completely anchored in this physical world - and that they are spirit. I do know, because I have been there myself.

However, under normal circumstances, the "frame-of-reference" is so utterly convincing, that we don't realise. I think this is intentional and necessary for us to be able to operate properly in this world; but once you have had a taste of the other, you are never quite the same again.

Such reflections and observations lead me to propose that we live in a universe which is only a subset of many more dimensions, which are not directly accessible to us.

FURTHER -

If we cannot understand the nature of our own consciousness, how can we even begin to speculate on that of other - conscious - intelligent beings?

Referring back to Gato-Rivera's thesis - the point that we cannot easily discriminate between levels higher than our own - is crucial. She says that we suffer from the "crown of creation syndrome". She's right. ■

Special FSR report: Flying cigar-like object captured over Ontario crop circle in 2003. Are these distant accompanying objects flying spheres?

Mona Farrell heard about the new crop circle very near her home in Wallacetown, Ontario and as she put it, "thought we'd go take a boo at it.

" This was the first crop circle Mona had ever visited. "It was so impressive, the way it was laid down, it was just so flat, it was woven together."

She said she believed it to be too perfect to have been man-made. The circle appeared in late August of this year. While standing in the circle, Mona's friend Amy took a 35mm photo of her.

It wasn't until the film was developed that they noticed the peculiar looking object in the sky above Mona. "It's certainly strange," she said, "I don't know what it is." Mona took the film to a lab and had the negative examined. They determined that whatever it is, it's not a defect on the film, but is actually in the scene and part of the natural photograph.

The strange object in the picture appears to have an entirely symmetrical structure, with two "broom like" extensions on either end of a classic 'cigar' or cylinder shaped UFO body. There is also a bright 'orb' of light below it.

FSR comment: The main area of contention in any modern cigar image is whether one is looking at an image of a solar balloon. Assessing the context of the sighting becomes all-important. FSR has interviewed Mona on her sighting for her own story.

Mona: The time it was taken, if I remember correctly ,it was around supper-time, five o'clock. There was nothing in the air that we could see and the object only appeared on the one picture. There was no solar balloon, it was sunny and the sky was clear. It was not visible to the naked eye. When Amy took that picture of me she said there was nothing in the sky.

FSR: There are also two light anomalies in the sky behind the field (marked by arrows). I understand you may have also seen five small discs inthe sky over your home.

Mona: My daughter and myself were outside that night in the backyard. It was dark out but we saw something gliding over head. It went over the house then came back. Then it went over the house again and came back, by this time we were a little spooked.

We got out the binoculars, when it did this again my daughter went inside as it was freaking her out. I locked in on it with the binoculars. There were 5 small discs, they were not overly big, maybe the size of footballs. They almost seemed florescent. They kept weaving in and out of each other. It was quite a sight! Then they disappeared.

Is this object (featured below) a cloud cigar?
Recently photographed by Kristina Minard.
Cigar-like objects have historically been observed to form within clouds. Aime Michel described such events happening in the 1954 French Cigar UFO wave. Such events were also observed over Warminster England and also in Wiltshire England. This object remained an unseen artefact when the photograph was taken and therefore was not a credible UFO. It remains a curiosity as a discreet tubular cloud formation..

Classic small sphere footage (below) was filmed at Barbary Castle England 1999. Mona observed five of these type of objects over her house. Mona was already likely to have been a repeat UFO witness when she unknowingly caught the cigar in her crop circle image.

September 14th 2003, London experiences multiple spheres. Images caught on 4 cameras. London observer chain.

At approximately 2pm on September the 14th 2003, just outside central London, a cigar like object flying at altitude was seen to split into two separate halves. From 3pm onwards a cascade of white sphere-like objects were seen to pass over the entire North London area. This spectacle took place over 4 hours and involved twenty or more separate objects.

The spheres passed in full view of members of the observer chain. However, one member was on a motorway far to the North and was made to witness the same phenomenon. The objective of this short article is to demonstrate the effectiveness of having an organised chain of observers in a modern city environment. Readers could consider operating a similar system by setting up a line of resourceful observers in their own locality.

The principal sighting was of a main trio of spheres forming a gigantic spinning triangle in the sky for some minutes near the center of London. Elsewhere some of the spheres had grouped together to form structures. On film some larger spheres were approached by much smaller ones in a very deliberate way. It is clear that these miniature spheres pass the main objects with great precision; almost as if they were aware that they would be seen. This small sphere behaviour cannot be a coincidence; it is a part of the main phenomenon. It is a form of authentication that immediately says to the informed observer "I am not a balloon".

The sheer scale of the rotating triangular formation and the very wide distribution of sphere activity encompassed much of the visible air space above London. However, the sighting reports were very specific in their distribution and location so that individuals rather than the general population were targeted as witnesses on this occasion.

White spheres have previously appeared over Mexico and Chile in impressive fleets. The other place where they are most very frequently observed is Great Britain. The key to our understanding of the sphere is to recognise that this is merely the opaque envelope of an energy field surrounding the craft. A sphere hides the identity of a small alien flying object; it makes for far less threatening images, such as the psychological fear of alien invasion. Perhaps this is why so few small saucer craft are clearly photographed these days. Here is the image gallery; they were a beautiful and elegant spectacle. ■
